

CARBON EXPO 2011

Side Event: "Carbon markets: financing development"

The contribution to sustainable development is specifically included in Article 12 of the Kyoto Protocol, as an objective for CDM. Even though it is the responsibility of the host country and UNFCCC to assess the contribution to sustainable development, all stakeholders of CDM projects need to be involved in its development - both private and public sector - in order to tackle enough resources for its contribution to be meaningful.

Experience gained in CDM development allows for a deep reflection on issues such as how to design sustainable development components (social & environmental), how to safeguard and monitor them and how to assess their impact. In a moment when the debate on the improvement of market mechanisms is gaining momentum, this side event will contribute to it with expert 's opinions on the relationship between carbon markets and development.
